able property for payment of interest on bonded indebtedness and sinking fund requirements. Also, 3 mills on taxable property for recreational purposes. The total taxation is 37 mills.

– Approved an emergency ordinance amending the administrative code for Carbondale to include Blue Cross/Blue Shield benefits for members of council, which had been normally included in the yearly budget.

– Council heard a request form administrator Judge for a stop sign on River Street at the intersection of 6th Ave. to accommodate the fire trucks. Council tabled the request for further research. Judge, in his report to council, stated that something had to be done about the garbage pickup situation, that he was not getting any satisfaction from the present company, Lackawanna Refuse.

Council instructed the city clerk to set up a meeting with an alternative collector and indicated they would terminate the contract with the present company if arrangements could be made with another company.

An angry councilwoman Moro, responding to a question by Councilman Calzola concerning the possible formation of an industrial committee for the city, told members of council, "Maybe you didn't read yesterday's newspaper, but the mayor said that the ones he would like to appoint to that industrial committee would not like to deal with City Council. I'd like to challenge him to bring the people here and see what their reasons are for not wanting to deal with council.

"This is the trouble with the city of Carbondale." Mrs. Moro said, "Between the mayor and council there's too damn much running to the newspapers with the story, and the newspapers are not checking it out. The newspapers should really check the pros and cons before they print it. This is why the bickering is going on the way its is."

She also requested that the $30,000 that remained in the West Side account be considered for a parking lot on the West Side and asked Community Development director Joseph Kohut to contact two individuals on the West Side.

Mrs. Moro also asked for a complete accounting of the West Side account and for council to find out why $600 a month is paid to a police officer to compile the daily roster, and to advertise for an independent auditor to audit all city accounts.

Councilman Grecco denounced the constant bickering between council and the administration, and commended the city's street department for the job they've done thus far on the city streets.
